Air Pick-Up can Serve Nation at Low Cost

AIR PICK-UP, tested and proved while conventional short haul air transportation is still in the developmental stage, could almost overnight extend the benefits of direct air mail and express service to every part of the nation. It could be done at little or no cost to the government or local communities.

Technical progress may revolutionize future air transportation, but there is no development in sight which will supplant Air Pick-Up in the field for which it was designed. Representing the intensive development of short haul and local transportation, the operation can also be adapted to a high-speed combination passenger and Pick-Up service over short routes serving cities and towns relatively close together.

As the pioneer Air Pick-Up operator, All American Aviation is preparing to extend its own operating routes. As the manufacturer of Air Pick-Up equipment, All American offers the facilities and services of the company to others in the development of Air Pick-Up operations.
